

First Federal Bank of Kansas City adds Nathan Boylan to lead consumer banking expansion initiative

Boylan will oversee customer acquisition efforts and champion digital and in-branch customer care

LEAWOOD, Kan., April 25, 2022 -- First Federal Bank of Kansas City has hired Nathan Boylan as its Director of Consumer Banking, a newly created position tasked with advancing the mutual bank's retail banking and consumer lending activity.

Boylan will lead the bank's customer acquisition programs as well as supervise the ongoing care and service of current customers, digitally and through the branch network.

"Nate's strategic leadership experience grounded in a heart for service fit flawlessly within our culture at First Federal," said J.R. Buckner, bank CEO and president. "His dedication not only to reaching and exceeding company goals, but also to our mission of helping others build a better financial future gives our team the opportunity to further impact communities within the Kansas City metropolitan area and beyond."

"The opportunity to deepen relationships and build new relationships is compelling, and I look forward to helping people in our communities prosper," Boylan said. "In addition, the talented and trusted banking advisors at First Federal Bank of Kansas City are diligently working for a purpose bigger than profit that will benefit the community in many ways. The organization is a wonderful fit for me!"

Boylan brings more than 18 years of retail banking experience to First Federal Bank. He was the senior regional executive at Academy Bank, managing branch locations throughout Kansas and Missouri. He also served as the CEO and president of KUMC Credit Union, where he planned and executed all financial processes and growth strategies to optimize success.

Boylan will be based out of First Federal Bank's new corporate office in the Aubrey Building of Park Place in Leawood, Kansas.
